Featuring American Red Cross's Steve Eberlein

Steve Eberlein is a native of Klamath Falls, Oregon. Prior to coming to the Red Cross, he worked in Spain, Thailand, Costa Rica and Sri Lanka as a Spanish and English teacher. At the end of his second year in Sri Lanka, the island nation was struck by Boxing Day Tsunami, which took the lives of approximately 35,000 there and 227,000 in all affected countries combined. Shortly thereafter, he began work with a major nongovernmental organization in the recovery effort. Steve has been with the Oregon Trail Chapter of the Red Cross for two years, first as a safety training instructor and currently as a training and safety training consultant.
